Clinical Leadership and Management Courses for Surgeons

This course complies with the criteria and standards for up to 18 CPD Credits

Our Keele courses are run over three days and are intended for Specialty Trainees in their penultimate or final years of training; trainees at an earlier stage may also be interested. They are also open to SAS doctors wishing to prepare for a consultant position. Courses are specialty-based and satisfy the curriculum requirements for acquiring management and leadership skills to complete training.

Our courses will prepare participants for the transition from training to independent specialist practice at consultant level, introducing them to contemporary concepts of leadership and management, as well as offering insights into the consultant appointment process. The sessions are themed and linked to the new Healthcare Leadership Model. The programme design includes interactive presentations from policy experts, personal development consultants and other senior people experienced in the particularly specialty.

Course dates:

Monday 9th to Wednesday 11th November 2015

Monday 1st to Wednesday 3rd February 2016 (RCS, London)

Monday 9th to Wednesday 11th May 2016

Our surgical-specialty trainee courses focus on:

- examining what leading and managing mean in the context of the Consultant role;
- creating a sound understanding of how the NHS operates and is financed;
- helping course members to prepare for successful interviews and their early years as a Consultant;
- enabling participants to develop skills in service improvement;
- enhancing personal effectiveness through a menu of leadership and management skills and techniques.

Learning outcomes will be:

- a working knowledge of NHS structure, policy and finance to support the early years as a Consultant;
- greater proficiency in the key leadership and management skills required for effective practice, including a focus on service improvement;
- confidence to apply successfully for a Consultant post.
